

Certificate for Music Educators (CME)

A professional qualification for musicians working with children and young people

Why choose the CME with Wren Music?

Wren Music is a vibrant practising community music organisation, with over 30 years of experience in working with music and young people. The course is run by expert music leaders and project managers, who understand your work situation.

Wren Music's CME is delivered in partnership with the Musicians Union, the globally-respected organisation which represents over 30,000 musicians working in all sectors of the music business.

The course is based on your own practice, blending on-line resources and self-guided study with face-to-face training from Wren Music. You can develop your practice and share real life experiences alongside your student colleagues.

“ I gained a lot of knowledge and understanding of how to go forward as a music educator. ”

“The course is thought provoking, well presented and positive.”

“Be prepared to be challenged and try new methods and approaches.”

“The CME helped me to overcome my ‘imposter syndrome’ at work.”

What will I get?

You'll come away with a nationally recognised qualification, accredited by Trinity College, which gives potential employers confidence in your skills as a music educator.

Through guided learning and building a portfolio across six core units, you will develop and evidence all the skills and understanding required to be a successful music educator.

When does it start?

The course runs every year from September to July, with six face-to-face training days at Wren Music's headquarters. This delightful converted chapel, in the charming moorland town of Okehampton, is the perfect setting to take a step back and reflect on your skills and your career as a music educator.

What does it cost?

The course fees are £1,000, which includes all teaching, access to the online learning space, assessment, certification and a 'graduation' event. Bursaries may be available, please contact us for details.
